Re: Litigation Conclusion through Settlement

This is to inform that, on April 9, 2008, Wacom and Hanwang Technology Corporation has entered into a comprehensive settlement agreement regarding the series of patent and utility model infringement lawsuits previously reported on September 11, 2007, January 29, 2008, and March 4, 2008.

1. History of litigation and settlement

In November and December of 2007, Wacom filed the patent infringement lawsuits against Hanwang in China and United States requesting for the injunction against infringement of multiple Wacom patents by the pen tablet products manufactured and sold by Hanwang.

In December 2007 and January 2008, Hanwang filed the utility model infringement lawsuit against Wacom China Corporation and its distributors at Shijiazhuang Intermediate People's Courts in Hebei Province, China and at Harbin Intermediate People's Court in Heilongjiang Province, China. Through discussions outside of court, the parties have reached a comprehensive settlement agreement.

2. Terms of Settlement

The terms of settlement is regarded confidential. As the effect of settlement, both parties will withdraw, or file for a consent judgment, covering all pending lawsuits and legal proceedings against each other.

3. Effect on the financial forecast

There will be no effect on the financial forecast.
