Re: Wacom Operations Affected by Tohoku Pacific Earthquake (2)

Wacom Co., Ltd. updated its status on the influence of the Tohoku Pacific Earthquake which struck on March 11, 2011 and was announced on March 16, 2011 and described in the 'Special message from Wacom' on its home page on March 18, 2011. Please refer to the details below.

1. Status of damage:

i) Employees working at domestic site

All employees are currently reported to be safe.

ii) Domestic site

While the administration building and factory building headquarters (Kazo-shi, Saitama Prefecture) were partially damaged, we have resumed our normal operations. As reported in the latest announcement, no damage in the Tokyo branch or in each domestic office (Nagoya, Osaka, Fukuoka) has been recognized.

2. Influence on the production activity

Most of the production facilities are overseas and our domestic factory has already resumed its normal operations. We have already confirmed that there are no difficulties in production activity until April. Outside influences which include parts suppliers and partners' operations near the circumference of the ruined area, the power supply situation and systems of distribution etc. are expected to influence production activity after that. The influence on production activities will be suppressed to a minimum by having close cooperation with our suppliers and partners.

3. About compensating for the rolling blackout:

Prolonged and subdivided rolling blackouts are assumed and compensated by the use of private electric generators and flexible work hours.

4. Influence on the latest forecast:

The impact of the earthquake on our financial performance is currently being evaluated. We intend to make an announcement promptly should we foresee significant impact to our business.

Wacom expresses its deepest sympathies for those affected by the disaster and sincerely hopes for a quick recovery.
